Specification

The amendment filed December 18, 2008 is objected to under 35 U.S.C. 132(a) because it introduces new matter into the disclosure. 35 U.S.C. 132(a) states that no amendment shall introduce new matter into the disclosure of the invention. The added material which is not supported by the original disclosure is as follows:

The amendment to paragraph 0022 in lines 1 and 2 of page 6 introduce new matter because the iron cores are now described as being optionally inserted into the rubber molding, and the iron cores being inserted "in multiple-folded form" into the rubber molding is new matter as this was not described in the disclosure as originally filed.

It is suggested that the phrases "can optionally be" and "in multiple-folded form" be deleted from paragraph 0022. As long as the iron cores are not claimed, there will be no further need to object to the specification regarding paragraph 0022.

Applicant is required to cancel the new matter in the reply to this Office Action.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claims 1 and 4 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as being anticipated by Fukushima (Japanese Published Application 04-133878).

Fukushima discloses a separable rubber track comprising a plurality of segments (figure 6) each comprising a plurality of steel cores 12 for engaging a sprocket, a pair of connection cores 20 disposed at the ends of the segments and connected to the steel cores (at least through the rubber track), and coupling members comprising a top member 33 and a bottom member 35 . The connecting cores include pins 23 rotatably received by the coupling members in grooves 32 to connect the ends of adjacent segments. The coupling members 33, 35 are fastened together by fastening means such as bolts 38. See also figures 2-5.

The intended use of the track, such as on a tank, is given no patentable weight.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed December 18, 2008 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

It is believed that the elements recited at the bottom paragraph of page 7 of the Response, namely (a) the connection cores including leading ends and a pair of connection pins rotatably connecting adjacent track links, and (b) the coupling members divided into top and bottom members forming connection grooves into which the pins are rotatably inserted, are taught by the track of Fukushima

As noted in the rejection above, the top coupling member 31 and the bottom coupling member 35 form grooves 32 to rotatably receive the pins 23 to connect the ends of the track.

Although the top and bottom connecting members 10 of Applicants' invention each comprise shallow grooves (or half grooves) which together form an enclosed opening or groove which clamps the connecting pin therein when the top and bottom connecting members are secured together by the fasteners 9. However, this structure is not claimed. Instead, the claims merely recite that the top and bottom members "form connection grooves." As there is no recitation of any structure which forms grooves when the top and bottom are assembled, this limitation is interpreted to claim that the top and bottom members define grooves to receive the pins.

Note the patents to Knight and Edwards et al cited in the previous office action which show top and bottom members which receive pins or rods in grooves formed therein and clamp the pins or rods when the top and bottom members are assembled.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
